dataglobal email management

Archiving, managing and using valuable information

With dataglobal email management, you can manage and archive your emails with automatic revision-proofing and use them for your business processes.

Finally, emails can be placed in a business context and assigned to process projects in the digital workplace. Valuable information contained in emails can be used for digital workflows.

All archived emails and attachments remain unchanged and fully accessible, even after many years. You have access to your business emails from anywhere and at any time; no need to search for important information again.
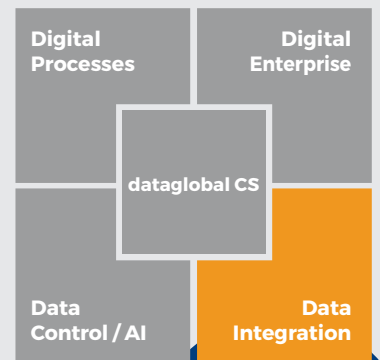

Why email management?

The rapid growth of email communication poses a real challenge for your company and you as a user. While your mailbox is bursting at the seams, managing and storing information is becoming more and more complex. E-mail quotas mean that
• important information is lost from your business
• users are compromised in their work
• your ITs performance suffers and becomes inefficient

Email quotas are a thing of the past with dataglobal's email management. Besides the revision-proof long-term email archiving, dataglobal email management is also a clever email management solution that always ensures you have a reliable edge when it comes to knowledge.

Seamlessly archive communications

Emails have legally binding document status in business life and must be archived in an audit-proof manner for compliance reasons. A tidy house, a tidy mind, but who can find a specific email after a couple of months have passed? Better record-keeping is often the deciding factor. Anyone who can keep seamless, documented evidence, including communications relating to a project, has a clear advantage. dataglobal email management gives you this overview – anytime, anywhere.
